

Commerzbank AG Crypto Custody in the Corporate Clients Segment

Pricing, Costs, and Fees Policy

In accordance with Article 66 (4) of the Markets in Crypto Assets Regulation ("MiCAR"), Commerzbank Aktiengesellschaft ("Commerzbank") is required, as a provider of crypto-asset services, to make its policies on pricing, costs, and fees publicly available.

The rates and prices listed in the following overview do not include applicable discounts or surcharges that may be specifically applied to individual clients. The individually agreed terms and conditions can be based on various factors, which are illustrated in the following non-exhaustive list.

- Volume of the assets held under custody
- Number of (expected) transfers
- Number of crypto-custody accounts
- Number of blockchain addresses per crypto-custody account
- Individual customer requirements, as well as contractual and operational complexity concerning reporting agreements

Fee Components
Custody Fee (in % p.a. on the daily determined equivalent value in EUR)	Max. 0.5% p.a.
Transfer Fee	Max. EUR 75 per transaction
Account Opening Fee	Max. EUR 1,000, -
Minimum account fee per month	Max. EUR 2,000, - per account
External Cost Components
Costs of outgoing transfers (Block-chain-Fees)	Blockchain-transaction fees (or gas fees) are calculated and provided indicatively for each individual outgoing transaction. Prior to executing a transfer the bank will provide the client with information on the expected Blockchain-fees via E-Mail.

Tax

The rates and fees are net rates or net amounts. If VAT or comparable taxes apply, these will be charged additionally.

Important Note

This document is for informational purposes only. The rates listed are indicative for the individual customer terms for the crypto-asset services provided by Commerzbank AG. Furthermore, this document does not constitute legally binding obligations for Commerzbank AG to offer crypto-asset services at the indicated conditions. Additional discussions may be required to address the specific details of each individual case.